How Much Time Do I Have?

This question has many answers depending on the claim. We recommend consulting an attorney as soon after an injury as circumstances allow. Depending on the nature of the claim and the status of the defendant you may have as little as six months or as much as two years within which to file a claim.

An attorney usually needs time within which to collect the information and research the claim before action can be started therefore it is essential that the attorney be contacted early.

All legal claims are governed by some form of time based "statute of limitation" which is a limitation on the amount of time someone has before they must file a lawsuit in order to preserve their rights.
